Honoring our parents

A gift to Southeastern recognizes their many gifts to us

By Philip Murphy
Development Director

This year, please consider giving a gift to Southeastern Children's Home in honor or memory of your parents' sacrifice.

There's no precise way to repay your parents for the sacrifices they made for you. But, there are several ways to express your love towards them.

"... Are your parents still waiting for you to thank and honor them?..."

The fifth commandment to honor your father and your mother is the only commandment with a promise attached – if we honor our parents, we will experience God's blessing.

As a parent, you've perhaps caught yourself saying (or thinking), "One day my children will thank me for that!" It's OK. Your parents probably said the same thing.

So here's my question: Are your parents still waiting for you to thank and honor them?

Don't wait. Tell your parents "thank you."

We honor our houseparents at Southeastern Children's Home every day of the year.

This Christmas season, understand that the best way you can pay tribute to your parents' sacrifices is through the gift of honor.

Please consider making a sacrificial gift of your own. A gift to Southeastern Children's Home provides a lasting way to honor those who sacrificed for you.

Being thankful for their sacrifice

We may never know how much our parents gave us of themselves

By Robert Kimberly
Executive Director

I took some time during Veteran's Day to reflect on the sacrifices which had been made by our soldiers throughout our nation's history. As I reflected, my mind shifted slightly, and I began to think of all the sacrifices that my parents made for me.

Parenting is a sacrifice. While we don't often know the exact sacrifices our parents made for us, each of our parents sacrificed time, money, and often their well-being.

Perhaps our parents could have chosen different career paths that could have been more lucrative, but instead they chose family. Perhaps our parents could have spent more time pursuing hobbies, but instead they chose time with their family. Perhaps there were times when our parents could have been spontaneous and carefree, but they chose family stability instead.

Perhaps some of our parents even sacrificed their good health so that we could be well.

Our houseparents at Southeastern Children's Home are amazing people. Each of these couples are an amazing blessing to our children. The Walker, Caroon, Davis and Duke

Liz, a Lyman House resident, speaking with her house-mom. Liz had talked about missing her family earlier that day.

Being thankful for their sacrifice

families are wonderful people and excellent Christian role models. Each day, these families make indelible impressions on our children in each of our group homes.

Sacrifices are difficult. In many ways, sacrifices run counterintuitive to our selfish nature. They require a conscious act to put ourselves in harm’s way. Sacrifice requires effort, and often pain.

This month, I am thankful for the sacrifice that others have made for Southeastern Children’s Home. I am not only thankful for the sacrifices that have been made by our houseparents, I’m also thankful for those who have made sacrifices to make sure our ministry exists. I’m thankful for each of you who have given time and resources to ensure a better life for our children at Southeastern.

Thank you for your sacrifice.

Sincerely,

Robert
